I am interested in reapplying to the Youth Commission. After two years, much work has been done to revive the commission and yet with all the issues plaguing the youth today there is still more to do. The first reason is that more work is needed to make the Youth Commission a fully operational organization. Creating a sustainable system for conducting research, hosting events, and giving back to the community is the top priority. The second reason is that effective youth outreach is more important than ever. More and more young and teenage boys and girls are falling through the cracks each year. The third and final reason is that a greater understanding of the root causes of the issues New Haven youth face is a cause for hope. Research is confirming the importance of strong families, strict (but fair) discipline, and education based on the fundamentals. During my time volunteering for the Youth Commission, I expect to see more progress towards creating a better future for the youth of this city, and their families. Thank you for your consideration.
