

Executive Summary

Through this grant, the New Haven Health Department will build a multi-sector team to identify, review, and access policies that affect health equity and health outcomes among children ages nine months to 20 years in New Haven. Policies to be accessed include those governing access to primary and preventive health care services and the identification and remediation of lead and asthma hazards in homes. The multi-sector review team will identify areas of improvement within these policies so that factors contributing to structural racism in public health can be addressed.

A policy and outcomes evaluation will be conducted by to assess the Team's work and effects in health outcomes among pediatric populations that can be attributed to policy modifications.
